BILL WOULD PROVIDE ELECTRIC POWER HERE

Proposes Huge Appropriation to Build U. S. Plants and Take Over Others

Washington, Aug. 19. To meet the urgent need for electric power in shippards, munition factories and other war industries, a bill approved by the war industries board was introduced into the House today by Representative Sims, of Tennessee. This measure authorizes the President

"We are facing a power shortage which for some time has been acute and brillante azione nella scorsa settimana is hampering our program of essential L'attacco, operato dopo una violenta war production," said Mr. Sims. The idea is that all small plants shall be speeded up to their full capacity and shall be linked with the bigger power plants of the city nearest which they are situated. It will also enable the Government to give every possible assistance to the Philadelphia Electric company and other power companies in this and nearby States, for the enlarge ment of their present plants to mee ment of their present plants the needs of war industries.

Since leaving England I seem to have heard nothing but stories like that. My cabin companion at sea was one who a few months ago left Petrostrad and the works he had controlled there—works that employed 10,000 hands. One day the labor unrest took the form of his entry into a sack. The neck of the sack was tied, then he felt himself being rudely dragged across the floor to where he could be quickly tipped out into the river. Clearly he foresaw what was coming, having known others of his class to perish that way. But the works had a guard of old soldiers who were maimed, but loyal, and they rescued their master.
